

24 hours off the airplane, and it's clear I haven't recovered my rest. I had got into bed about 2:30 AM, and this is my second preaching stop of the day: Ongole Church of Christ where V. David Raju preaches.

A typical outdoor assembly

An elder in the church, an artist with wood, made a bobble-head doll intended as an image of me.

This monkey-headed man is one of the many idols of Hinduism. Different idols are preeminent in different regions. This one in western Andhra Pradesh is also common in eastern Telangana.

The small truck ahead of us is carrying a typical load of coconut husks that may be used for fuel, mulch, or other needs.

With P. Praveen Kumar and other members of the church that meets in Chikaluripet.

The banner welcomes us to Chimiriya in the Nalagonda district of the state of Telangana.

Often we see wild monkeys on roadsides and in trees. Once we saw one in the front yard of a country home. There is seldom only one alone; once I saw as many as a dozen in a tree. There are several breeds in the area.
